BURDEN (LOVE, BUILDER OF WORLDS REMIX)

After becoming disabled in 2020, she furthered her knowledge of disability justice by committing to strictly virtual performances and remote music creation. She now continues to release music, visual art projects and physical zines. Her latest multimedia project is called "Burden" funded by Youth Music.

We've all felt isolated at some point. Whether it be from our friends, work or even our family.

Since the start of the pandemic, disabled people have been isolated from everyday life. Which means having to navigate relationships in ways we've never had to before.

Burden is about the feeling of not being protected by those who promised they would. No matter what you say, they'll prioritise their safety over yours. This song shows you that you're better off without them, even though it hurts.

This song is a collaboration with Love, Builder of Worlds who is an electronic artist based in Ireland. They wanted to remix Burden, my original song to create a version inspired by early 2000s Garage.

We didn't want the new song to distract from the original message. However, we wanted people skankin' to this version - we hope you do!
