

Press Release:

“Loser” is the sarcastic and jaunty single from the singer/songwriter Anusha about finally getting closure over a terrible relationship. If you're looking to laugh, cry, shout at your ex - Anusha has a song for that.

This is the second single that is being released off Anusha’s 2022 mixtape “Vendetta” Like many people entering her mid-twenties, Anusha has been experiencing some self-discovery, whether she wanted to or not. She decided to write a “farewell” to every toxic relationship, situation and even some parts of herself that no longer served her.

However, this is not Anusha’s first creative project. When she was 10 years old, she had her first poem published in the cover of a poetry collection. As she grew older, she has always strived to illustrate her surroundings through her poetry, her prose and her singing. It dawned on her that if she could mesh her Classical musical knowledge with eclectic contemporary sounds that were exposed to her as a child she could create a sound that was unique to her. Now taking her inspiration from Bon Iver, Mitski and Sevdaliza; she’s ready to share her lyricism and sound outside of her bedroom.

Loser is being released on November 19th. Anusha is excited to share some of her inspirations of 90s indie rock and electronic alt-pop and blend it into a song that she hopes resonates with anyone that has been fucked over with too. [insert an endorsement if you have one].

Bio:

Born in Berkshire, Anusha started to show a passion for poetry at the age of 6, and by the age of 10, had her first poem published by her primary school. Her mother ignited her love for music, introducing her to a wide range of different genres that inspire her creative process to this day, such as; Pop, Rnb, Alternative/Indie Rock.

She began to study music classically at the age of 13. After achieving the highest grade from ABRSM, she decided to mix her classical music training and poetic exploration, to begin developing her own unique and creative sound. She's currently influenced by the lyrical rawness of Mitski and Bon Ive whilst also being inspired by the electronic melodies of Sevdaliza.

She joined local singing groups and started gigging in her hometown. Eventually, she partook in 'The Henley Festival 2016' and had her original music featured on Soho radio. After moving to London when she was 18, she began debuting her original tracks at gigs across the Tottenham area; once again taking part in local community festivals.

After releasing her first single "Someone I Never Wanted" (produced by Fred Lessore) in the summer of 2021, she is gearing up to release her second single on 18th November. Her mixtape will be released in 2022.
